Clean X-treme turns 10 years old...

Through their work as Emergency Medical Technicians, Ray and Jim saw a need for biohazard clean-up services in Northeast Indiana and surrounding areas. They put over six months into researching whether or not this would be a valuable service to the community. After they decided it was, and with approval from their spouses to move forward, they formed Clean X-treme, Inc. in 1997.

However, as they continued to move forward with their company, one dilemma they faced was how to get the word out on providing a service that, well, depends on not-so-enticing circumstances... murder, suicide and death. These are, after all, not your typical services. They felt that direct marketing to surrounding counties and attending the annual Indiana State Coroners Conference each summer was their best bet.

Sure enough, clean-ups began to slowly trickle in, with Ray and Jim doing all of them. Initially, they responded with a 12-foot Wells Cargo trailer equipped with everything they knew they would need... supplies, equipment, and methods of disposal. Because they alone responded to the clean-ups, sleep was almost non-existent, as they were called out in the middle of the night or working at the clean-up after their regular full-time jobs.

But their hard work and effort have paid off. Ten years later, Clean X-treme has completed several hundred clean-ups with a staff of eight highly-trained and experienced workers who assist in providing to those who are in need. Although they still have the trailer as a backup vehicle, they now operate from a specially designed high-tech truck with state-of-the-art equipment and supplies.

As Ray and Jim look back, they realize how quickly those ten years have passed and the advanced technologies they use compared to a few short years ago. Both admit that Clean X-treme has encountered many diverse and strange cleaning opportunities. They have built countless friendships and remain committed to providing the best service possible for the next decade and beyond. Day or night, you can count on Clean X-treme to take care of those necessary requirements that take the commitment of a dedicated and trained staff.

CLEAN X-TREME

The Biohazard Control and Clean-up Company

Interesting Clean-Up

Clean X-treme was hired by the city of Lafayette, Indiana to assist in the clean-up of a distressed home in the downtown area.

The water had been shut off for approximately five years. The home was infested with rodents. What made this situation extreme was that the homeowner had been urinating and defecating in an assortment of buckets and drinking bottles the entire time.

These containers were left fermenting in the homes two bathrooms. The city sanitation workers cleaned out the rest of the home, but would not venture into the bathrooms. They confessed the smell was much worse than the cities sewer treatment facility. This is when Clean X-treme came into the picture.

Two biohazard technicians worked for an entire day emptying and discarding containers - some of which had burst from fermentation. Then came the task of sanitizing. Our technicians both confess that the most difficult thing about this job was that the defecation was human.

Clean X-treme Is Undercover

We pride ourselves in being discrete and maintaining confidentiality as much as possible. Our response vehicles have no lettering or designations on them regarding our services or company name. We value the families we serve and see no reason to bring attention to ourselves or to the "scene" of the incident.

We believe the clean-up site and surrounding neighborhood is not a place to market our services with big lettering announcing to the neighborhood our clean-up services for Homicides, Suicides, Decomposition and other biohazard related events. Families appreciate our sensitivity to their feelings and have shared numerous times how impressed they were with the professionalism and compassion shown to their families.
